- See where Idwall speeds! a trusty soldier. A. Philippi.
2. [Spebian, to grow rich, Saxon.] To have success.
Make me not fight like the basilisk;
I've look'd on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so. Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.
Now if this suit lay in Bianca's pow'r,
How quickly should you speed. Shakespeare.
Macieus shewed them what an offence it was rashly to depart out of the city, which might be unto them dangerous, although they should speed never so well. Knolles.
When first this tempter cross'd the gulph from hell,
I told you then he should prevail, and speed
In his bad errand. Milton.
These were violators of the first temple, and those that profaned and abused the second sped no better. South.
3. To have any condition good or bad.
Ships heretofore in seas like fishes sped,
The mightiest fill upon the smallest fed. Waller.
TO SPEED. v. a.
1. To dispatch in haste.
The tyrant's self, a thing unused, began
To feel his heart relent with meek compassion;
But not dispos'd to ruth or mercy then,
He sped him thence home to his habitation. Fairfax.
2. To furnish in haste.
3. To dispatch; to destroy; to kill.
With a speeding thrust his heart he found;

And he, that's once deny'd, will hardly speed. Shakespeare.
SPEED. n. f. [speed, Dutch.]
1. Quickness; celerity.
Earth receives
As tribute, such a sunless journey brought
Of incorporeal speed, her warmth and light;
Speed to describe whose swiftness number fails. Milton.
We observe the horse's patient service at the plough,
his speed upon the highway, his docileness, and desire of glory. Mor.
2. Haste; hurry; dispatch.
When they strain to their utmost speed, there is still the wanted distance between them and their aims: all their eager pursuits bring them no acquiescence. Decay of Piety.
3. The course or pace of a horse.
He that rides at high speed, and with a pistol, kills a sparrow flying. Shakespeare. Henry IV.
4. Success; event.
If I read aught in heav'n,
Or heav'n write aught of fate, by what the stars,
Voluminous or single characters,
In their conjunction met, give me to spell,
Sorrow and labours, opposition, haste,
Attends thee. Milton's Paradise Lost.
When gowns, not arms, repell'd
The fierce Epirote, and the African bold,
Whether to settle peace, or to unfold
The drift of hollow states, hard to be spell'd. Milton.
And may at last my weary age
Find out the peaceful hermitage,
Where I may fit and rightly spell
Of every star that heav'n doth show,
And every herb that sips the dew. Milton.
5. To read unskillfully.
As to his understanding, they bring him in void of all notion, a rude unwritten blank; sent into the world only to read and spell out a God in the works of creation. South.

- In a scarcity in Silesia a rumour was spread of its raining millet-seed; but 'twas found to be only the seeds of the ivy-leaved speedwell, or small henbit. Derham's Physico-Theology.
SPEEDY. adj. [from speed.] Quick; swift; nimble; quick of dispatch.
How near's the other army?
—Near, and on speedy foot: the main defery
Stands on the hourly thought. Shakespeare. King Lear.
Back with speediest fall
Zophiel, of cherubim the swiftest wing,
Came flying. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Let it be enough what thou hast done,
When spotted deaths ran arm'd through ev'ry street,
With poison'd darts, which not the good could shun,
The speedy could outfly, or valiant meet. Dryden.
SPELL. n. f. [spell, Saxon, a word.]
1. A charm consisting of some words of occult power. Thus Horace uses words:
Sunt verba et voces quibus hunc lenire dolorem
Puffin.
Start not; her actions shall be holy:
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again; for then
You kill her double. Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.
Some have delivered the polity of spirits, that they stand in awe of charms, spells, and conjurations, letters, characters, notes, and daffies. Brown's Vulgar Errours.
Thou durst not thus disparage glorious arms,
Had not spells
And black enchantments, some magician's art,
Arm'd thee or charm'd thee strong. Milton's Agonistes.
Begin, begin, the mystick spell prepare. Milton.
Youself you to exord,
When you vouchsafe to breathe my thought,
That like a spirit with this spell
Of my own teaching, I am caught. Waller.
Mild Lucina
Then reach'd her midwife hands to speed the throes,
And spoke the pow'rful spells that babes to birth disclose. Dry.
2. A turn of work.
Their toil is so extreme as they cannot endure it above four hours in a day, but are succeeded by spells: the residue of the time they wear out at coytes and kayles. Carew.
To SPELL. v. a. [spellen, Dutch.]
1. To write with the proper letters.
In the criticism of spelling, the word satire ought to be with i, and not with y; and if this be so, then it is false spelled throughout. Dryden's Juvenal's Dedication.
2. To read by naming letters singly.
I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd,
But he would spell him backward; if fair fac'd,
Shed'd swear the gentleman should be her sister. Shakespeare.
3. To charm.
I have you fast:
Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty. Shak. Henry VI.
This gather'd in the planetary hour,
With noxious weeds, and spell'd with words of pow'r,
Dire Hepdames in the magic bowl infuse. Dryden.
To SPELL. v. n.
1. To form words of letters.
What small knowledge was, in them did dwell;
And he a god, who could but read or spell. Dryden.
By passing on the vowels and consonants on the sides of four dice, he has made this a play for his children, whereby his eldest son in coats, has played himself into spelling. Locke.
The Latin, being written of the same character with the mother-tongue, by the assistance of a spelling book, it is legible. Speelator.
Another cause, which hath maimed our language, is a foolish opinion that we ought to spell exactly as we speak. Swift.
2. To read.
If I read aught in heav'n,
Or heav'n write aught of fate, by what the stars,
Voluminous or single characters,
In their conjunction met, give me to spell,
Sorrow and labours, opposition, haste,
Attends thee. Milton's Paradise Lost.
When gowns, not arms, repell'd
The fierce Epirote, and the African bold,
Whether to settle peace, or to unfold
The drift of hollow states, hard to be spell'd. Milton.
And may at last my weary age
Find out the peaceful hermitage,
Where I may fit and rightly spell
Of every star that heav'n doth show,
And every herb that sips the dew. Milton.
3. To read unskillfully.
As to his understanding, they bring him in void of all notion, a rude unwritten blank; sent into the world only to read and spell out a God in the works of creation. South.

He spends his life with his wife, and remembereth neither father nor mother. 1 Eph. iv. 21.
When he was of riper years, for his farther accomplishment, he spent a considerable part of his time in travelling. Pope.
6. To waste; to wear out.
In those pastoral pastimes a great many days were spent, to follow their flying predecessors. Sidney.
The waves ascended and descended, 'till their violence being spent by degrees, they settled at last. Barnet's Theat. of the Earth.
The winds are rais'd, the storm blows high;
Be it your care, my friends, to keep it up
In its full fury, and direct it right,
'Till it has spent itself on Cato's head. Addison's Cato.
7. To fatigue; to harass.
Nothing but only the hope of spoil did relieve them, having scarce clothes to cover their nakedness, and their bodies spent with long labour and thirst. Knolles's History of the Turks.
Or come your shipping in our ports to lay,
Spent and disabled in so long a way? Dryden's Æn.
Our walls are thinly mann'd, our best men slain;
The rest, an heartless number, spent with watching,
And harass'd out with duty. Dryden.
Some spent with toil, some with despair oppress'd,
Leap'd headlong from the heights, the flames consum'd the rest. Dryden's Æn.
Thou oft hast seen me
Wrestling with vice and faction; now thou see'st me
Spent, overpower'd, despairing of success. Addison's Cato.
To SPEND. v. n.
1. To make expence.
Henceforth your tongue must spend at lesser rate,
Than in its flames to wrap a nation's fate. Dryden.
He spends as a person who knows that he must come to a reckoning. South.
2. To prove in the use.
Batter spent as if it came from the richer soil. Temple.
3. To be lost or wasted.
The found spendeth and is dissipated in the open air; but in such concaves it is conserved and contracted. Bacon.
On mountains, it may be, many dews fall, that spend before they come to the valleys. Bacon.
4. To be employed to any use.
There have been cups and an image of Jupiter made of wild vines; for the vines that they use for wine are so often cut, that their sap spendeth into the grapes. Bacon.
SPENDER. n. f. [from spend.]
1. One who spends.
Let not your recreations be lavish spenders of your time; but healthful, short, and apt to refresh you. Taylor.
2. A
